

We are Wyoming people
who love the outdoors.

Scott Kane

The size of our big-game herds rivals the size of our human population, and most of us choose to live here because of easy access to public lands, wildlife, clean air and water, and opportunities for outdoor recreation. These things define us as a people and help support our economy and quality of life.

2011 Wyoming Outdoor Council Events

June 4

Explore the Wild Fifteenmile Basin

Celebrate National Trails Day with an outing into the remote and often overlooked center of the Bighorn Basin. The Fifteenmile Basin is a scenic and delicate area of vast sagebrush and salt desert. Local geology and native plant gurus Claire and Rick Dunne will lead us on a three-mile hike.

RSVP by Friday, May 20.

June 18

Red Desert Rendezvous

The Outdoor Council is providing support for this event as part of our efforts to raise awareness of Wyoming's spectacular Red Desert.

This weekend rendezvous will offer at least three phenomenal guided tours: (1) A plein air painters' campout (Friday night) near the Honeycomb Buttes. (2) A journey into colorful Adobe Town. (3) An iconic-landscapes loop with stops at Boar's Tusk, the Killpecker Sand Dunes, and the White Mountain Petroglyphs.

RSVP by Friday, June 3.

June 24

Rock Springs Party

Meet and mingle with the Wyoming Outdoor Council staff, board of directors, members, and friends at an informal gathering. Food and drink are on us.

August 27

Ride the Red

Keep the tradition alive and come along for our annual mountain bike ride in the Red Desert. Enjoy the opportunity to experience one of the last intact high-desert ecosystems in North America, and tour the iconic Jack Morrow Hills. Join us as a participant and/or a volunteer!

RSVP by Monday, August 8.

September 10

Volunteer: Laramie River Restoration

Last year we yielded record results working on willows and we look forward to volunteering again with the Laramie Rivers Conservation District.

RSVP by Monday, August 29.

September 16

Jackson Party

Join us for a party in Jackson, where we will celebrate our successes and refuel for our ongoing and upcoming challenges.

November 11

Laramie Open House

Come out for a casual evening of conversation and good food and drink with the Wyoming Outdoor Council.

December 9

Lander Holiday Party

Come celebrate with members and friends!
